

End-of-life care and physician-assisted dying

Physician-assisted dying: Moving the debate forward

A debate for BMA members in the South West facilitated by Michael Buerk, Chairman of Radio 4's The Moral Maze

For the past year, the BMA has been engaging with doctors and members of the public as part of a major project on end-of-life care and physician-assisted dying.

Debates on assisted dying tend to be polarised and focused on support for or opposition to assisted dying. We want to move our debate beyond that binary approach and ask questions and think about the detail, should the legislative framework be different.

We now want to hear from you.

We will be hosting an evening meeting to present the findings of the project followed by an open debate on physician-assisted dying facilitated by Michael Buerk on some of the key questions for the medical profession in this area.

Wednesday 25 May 2016

19:00 – 21:00 (registration and refreshments from 18:30).

At-Bristol Science Centre

Reasonable expenses will be reimbursed.

Demand for this event will be high and places will be allocated by a ballot of those who apply to attend by Wednesday 20 April.

To apply to attend, and to find out more about the project, visit bma.org.uk/endoflifecare

British Medical Association
bma.org.uk